LETTER FROM THE CHAIRMAN

To Our Shareholders:

2010 was a year of important transitions for the Company. After eight years on the Board, I became Chairman in May of 2010, succeeding John Rollwagen, who had served as Chairman for nine years, holding our Board to the highest standards of governance. The Board wishes to thank John for his outstanding leadership.

Over the past two years, the Board has overseen a very well planned and well executed management transition process in preparation for Patrick Thiele's expected retirement as CEO; this resulted in Costas Miranthis being appointed Chief Executive Officer, and Bill Babcock, Marvin Pestcoe and Emmanuel Clarke joining Tad Walker as members of the Executive Committee. The Board is very pleased that all of these leadership appointments were internal successors. The management succession process has worked, and we have an outstanding, experienced and talented management team leading the Company.

The Board expresses its profound gratitude to Patrick Thiele, who, as the second CEO of the Company, is responsible for transforming PartnerRe into one of the world's leading global reinsurance companies. PartnerRe's outstanding track record, position in the market and reputation in the industry are tributes to Patrick's leadership over the past 10 years. Patrick has fostered an organization and culture with principles and values that will sustain PartnerRe's ability to thrive far into the future.

The integration of Paris Re is now complete, and the Board believes this acquisition has substantially enhanced the Company's position in the industry and our ability to successfully compete at the highest level.

Finally, the Board oversaw a comprehensive external governance review in 2010, resulting in a few refinements made to an already very strong governance process.

Looking ahead, as we continue to face a number of challenges in the industry, I believe PartnerRe is positioned to perform well in this challenging environment.

Jean-Paul Montupet
Chairman of the Board

SHAREHOLDER VALUE CREATION

- CUMULATIVE DIVIDEND
- BOOK VALUE PER SHARE

Dear Shareholders:

As this is my final CEO letter, I want to talk about how we did over the last decade as well as our performance in 2010. This will include some reflections on the reasons for our success, not just the facts themselves.

First, how did we do in 2010? We did reasonably well by the numbers. Our book value per share grew by 11% during the year, above our long-term goal. Our net premiums grew by 19% in a stagnant market (thanks to our acquisition of Paris Re in 2009), allowing us to provide greater consistency and continuity to our clients. And we increased our common share dividend twice during the year, to a record $2.20 annual rate, while at the same time repurchasing more than 14 million shares.

However, we did fall short of our goal of a 13% operating return on equity because of four factors: a higher beginning common shareholders' equity balance, persistently low interest rates, a competitive reinsurance market and a heavy large loss experience, specifically the Chilean and New Zealand earthquakes, the BP oil rig disaster and the Australian floods.

The real story of 2010 was not in the numbers though. It was around our continuing evolution as a company. Our accomplishments in the year included:

- Integrating Paris Re into PartnerRe
- Appointing a new CEO and effecting a smooth transition
- Announcing new executive leadership in our Global and Capital Markets Business Units, as well as the Finance function
- Electing a new Chairman of the Board of Directors

We did all this with a minimum of drama and with little disruption to our core reinsurance and investment activities. We remain financially strong, competitively well positioned and a good place to work.

Now to the reflective part. Since 2001, PartnerRe has made remarkable strides as a company. We've become a truly professional global risk-taking organization and we've hit our goals for book value per share and dividend growth.

Time Period	CAGR BVPS	Average Operating ROE	CAGR Dividend
2001-2010	10.2%	12.0%	7.0%
Goals	10%+	13%+	Consistent Growth

How did we do that in an industry that is intensely competitive and that does not allow differential pricing or other shortcuts to success? I believe our accomplishments stem from a few key principles that we have consistently followed over the last decade and not from individual brilliance or luck or prescience. Those principles, which have become part of our DNA, are:

- Unquestioned financial integrity
- Decentralized decision-making
- Global thinking
- Prudent/integrated risk management
- Honesty, transparency and integrity in all relationships

Over time, the world's economy will expand and shrink. The insurance markets will change, and corporate strategies will evolve, but I am confident that under Costas' leadership these principles and values will endure and guide the Company forward to continued success.

Finally, PartnerRe would not be what it is today without the enduring support of our loyal clients and the people of PartnerRe. I've had the pleasure of working with an excellent and committed executive management over the years – Mark Pabst, Bruno Meyenhofer, Scott Moore, Albert Benchimol and a team of highly professional employees. It has been an honor and a joy to work with such a great group of people. I wouldn't have missed it for the world.

Continuity and Adaptability

Striking the Right Balance

A LETTER FROM COSTAS MIRANTHIS, PRESIDENT AND CEO

To Our Shareholders:

By any standard, the last decade has been an exceptionally successful period for reinsurers. Clearly our industry benefited from the pricing upturn that was already gathering steam in early 2001 but which rapidly accelerated after the events of September 11. And yes, we were fortunate to enjoy benign liability loss trends over the period. But I think that our industry's success went beyond reaping the benefits of the usual "hard market – soft market" pattern. Perhaps the industry's most important accomplishment over the last few years has been the demonstration of our ability to cope with shocks. We have taken in our stride all kinds of storms, natural and financial – a clear sign that we have been getting better at our core skill of managing risk.

At PartnerRe, the last 10 years have been formative years as well as successful ones. We took advantage of market conditions to create significant wealth for our shareholders. We are proud that over the period we met or exceeded most of our financial goals. But we also emerged as a leading multiline reinsurer with a distinctive brand. We are not a company that follows market fashion or the consensus view, but we draw our strength from a clear set of values and principles.

We have a truly global geographic reach and capabilities in virtually every line of business. We rely on deep technical underwriting and quantitative skills underpinned and supported by a strong risk management culture and a comprehensive risk management framework that encompasses both reinsurance and investment risk. Our Business Unit structure decentralizes the decision-making process, allowing actions that are quick, flexible and informed at the local or line of business level. Within our organization, we have built a culture of trust through the respectful treatment of employees and commitment to open communication. This approach is carried through to our relationships with our clients, which are likewise based on openness, transparency and consistency of approach. And of course, the foundation of everything we do is unquestionable financial strength.

An Industry in Transition

The industry is currently at a turning point and reinsurers face a number of headwinds. As with any industry, we have to obey the laws of supply and demand. We have not found a way to defy this, any more than we have found a way to defy gravity. On the supply side, we reinsurers have to some extent, been victims of our own success. The industry has accumulated significant capital over the last decade, but the pace of this capital accumulation has been much faster than the expansion in demand for our product. As a result, pricing has been eroding for some years. Following the frequency of heavy large losses in the first quarter of 2011, we will wait and see if this accumulation of risk is enough of a catalyst for change. Adding to our current challenge, the erosion in underwriting margins is presently amplified by the low interest rate environment, which limits the potential for investment income return on our assets. But I remain convinced that the reinsurance cycles will remain very much part of our landscape. Perhaps in years to come, we may look at the confluence of a soft pricing environment and low interest rates as a blessing in disguise.

We have a truly global geographic reach and capabilities in virtually every line of business.

Managing peak risks: Catastrophe and casualty exposures are significant drivers of our risk capital, but they behave differently. Catastrophe risks – earthquake, hurricane and flood – are homogenous and are analyzed in the same way. Casualty differs by line and geography: the exposures in a workers' compensation book, a D&O book or a Motor XL cover are evaluated differently. But ultimately all volatile risks share one thing in common – the potential to materially damage our economic value. So we manage these by setting limits on our tolerance for specific risks and on the amount of capital that we are willing to expose.

Tad Walker
CEO PartnerRe North America

Managing the cycle: It's easy to say in hindsight that you should sit on the sidelines when markets are irresponsible, but it is frankly quite difficult to do in practice. During the go-go years leading up to the financial crisis our portfolio managers in CMG made a lot of tough calls avoiding unduly risky and mispriced securities. These were the "wrong" decisions quarter after quarter until it all blew up and it became clear how good those decisions really were. So how did we do it? We have very good portfolio managers, but it wasn't just that. Equally important is our risk framework and an incentive system that encourages managers to invest like owners, focus on long-term fundamental value and not get caught up chasing whatever happens to be hot at the moment.

Marvin Pestcoe
CEO PartnerRe Capital Markets Group

To successfully negotiate this cycle means focusing on the core skills of prudent underwriting, risk selection and risk management. So while there may be some discomfort for now, if we get it right, we have a lot to gain.

In the short term, our industry is also unlikely to get much relief from any imminent expansion in demand for our products. In the aftermath of the last financial crisis, government actions may have avoided depression, but the recovery, at least in the developed economies, may be a little muted and we may stumble several times along the way. And few would dispute that the balance of economic power is shifting toward the East. Insurable assets in emerging markets are growing at a very rapid pace and insurance penetration is increasing. However, it may be several years before the spectacular rates of growth that we see in emerging markets compensate for more modest growth in insurance demand in Western economies. Although intimately linked, demand patterns for insurers and reinsurers are also somewhat different. Reinsurers are ultimate holders of risk, particularly peak risks, and demand for peak risk is less sensitive in the short term to economic fluctuations. Moreover, we continue to discover areas where more peak risk protection is required than we previously thought necessary, as revealed by disasters such as Deepwater Horizon. At the same time, it appears that more of our clients are prepared to accept some volatility. I believe that in part this is a temporary reflection of the fact that after years of consistently good results, the potential significant volatility on our clients' earnings is not fully appreciated. To the extent that this is a longer-term trend, it presents us and fellow reinsurers with the challenge of how to maintain balanced diversified portfolios.

Facing the Future

Future success does not merely depend on adapting to changing demand and supply dynamics. How we address macro environment trends is equally important. Three trends come immediately to mind.

First is the possible re-emergence of inflation. Our industry generally does well at times of low inflation, and with time, we adjust our pricing to higher levels of inflation. But the transition from one environment to the other can be very painful. Both economic inflation and social inflation have been low and manageable over the last 10 years, but we have plenty of evidence that pressures are building: levels of public debt have reached unprecedented peacetime proportions, we have increasing commodities prices and there is an undercurrent of public opinion that seeks to address perceived inequality and other social injustices.

Second is the definite trend toward more regulation. In the aftermath of the financial crisis, it would have been unrealistic to expect anything else. There is a very real risk that reinsurers may face regulation that is inappropriate for our industry if we are not differentiated from the financial sector in general. I remain hopeful that the resilience so clearly demonstrated by our industry in the last financial crisis will be recognized. Also, as different regulators move at varying speeds and with potentially different priorities and agendas, they are creating a more complex and expensive environment in which we have to operate.

The third trend is demographic: our societies are growing older and our people are living longer. We need to fund our retirement better than we have done in the past, and our industry can play a role in this by offering solutions for longevity risk transfer.

What differentiates successful companies may be not so much the ability to identify and select attractively priced risk as the ability to avoid the “big mistakes.”

Continuity and Adaptability

This more challenging environment will test our mettle, but I am confident that at PartnerRe we have the people, the culture, the tools and the organizational structure not only to face the future with assurance, but to continue to differentiate ourselves. Perhaps more than ever in the future, in a marketplace where participants are better informed and pricing is more efficient, success may depend on avoiding costly mistakes and having fast reactions.

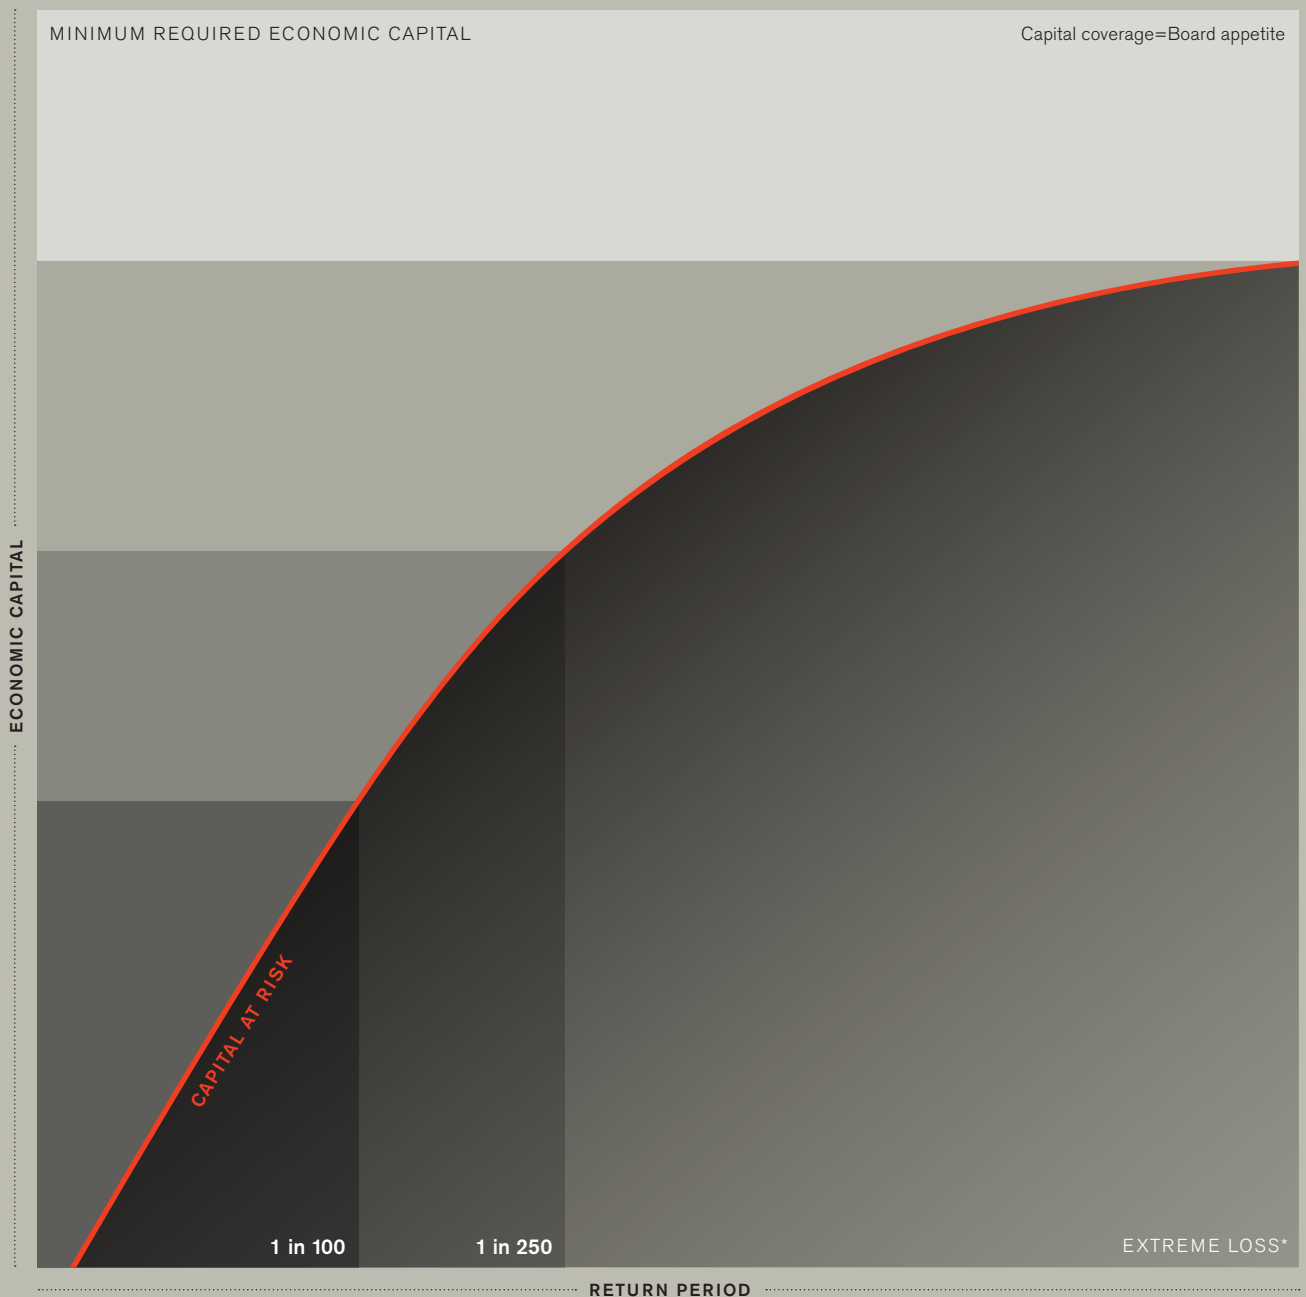

I believe we will succeed by finding the right balance between continuity and adaptability: continuity of those core attributes that distinguish PartnerRe today, combined with the ability to adapt to a changing environment where necessary.

We will continue to:

Maintain a diversified portfolio. Diversification is a great risk mitigation strategy and reduces volatility. In an environment where demand for reinsurance is likely to become more unbalanced and concentrated toward peak risks, having the access and skills to underwrite a diverse range of risks, and the management capability to construct a balanced portfolio, will be increasingly important.

Focus on managing risk. Sound technical understanding of risk, as well as robust risk management processes that encompass both sides of the balance sheet – assets as well as liabilities – will be even more critical than before. In the years to come, what will differentiate successful companies may be not so much the ability to identify and select attractively priced risk as the ability to avoid the “big mistakes.”

We have a culture of trust based on openness, transparency and consistency of approach. And of course the foundation of everything we do is unquestionable financial strength.

*Extreme loss includes modeled loss and estimates of loss for unmodeled risks

Adaptability: PartnerRe has been a very successful company over the last decade. Looking forward, we need to ask ourselves if the recipe for our success will work over the next 10 years. The environment is changing: it is a different world out there in terms of risk, economy and return expectations, and this requires adaptive skills. The Paris Re acquisition was a very useful process for us, because examining another company's portfolio helped to broaden our experiences, perspectives and skill sets.

Emmanuel Clarke
CEO PartnerRe Global

Efficient capital management in a challenging environment: It is increasingly difficult in the current environment to generate attractive risk-adjusted returns. One way to meet the challenge is to efficiently manage capital levels. We will never deviate from our obligation to our cedants, which is our unquestioned ability to pay claims. That is the fundamental underlying premise on which we run the Company. We will continue to first look for opportunities to deploy capital at appropriate returns and prudently manage our capital levels. That will be how we best manage this challenging market.

Bill Babcock
EVP and CFO PartnerRe Ltd.

Manage our capital efficiently and effectively. In an environment that is likely to present challenges, efficient capital management over time and our ability to rapidly and proactively attribute capital to those lines of business that offer the most attractive returns, can make an appreciable difference to the bottom line.

Guard our financial strength. The ability to withstand shocks, and capitalize on opportunities, will be essential going forward. Financial strength is always, to a large extent, dependent on capital buffers and lack of excessive leverage, but equally important are financial practices such as a prudent reserving philosophy. Having a financially conservative culture may not drive either good or bad decisions, but it certainly minimizes surprises.

I am grateful to Patrick Thiele for building a sound framework for this organization, not only in terms of structure and processes, but also in terms of culture. Our people have consistently shown their understanding of and commitment to PartnerRe's business principles. But at the same time I believe we need to continuously be aware of the need to learn from the past and adapt to our changing environment. The integration of the Paris Re organization into PartnerRe, which is now complete, gives me plenty of reason to be confident. I know that I have the people in the organization who can take on big tasks and succeed, and a leadership team with the awareness and vision to chart the right course.
